CONNECTIONS IN LATIN AMERICA

DuaneMorris®

& SELVAM LLP

A JOINT LAW VENTURE

As the world's leading investors, economists, financial experts, business analysts and geopolitical authorities assess global investment opportunities in the decade ahead, convergence is present on a major theme: The promise inherent in Latin America is no longer a future narrative, but an explosively emergent present-day reality. With a foundation of prodigious natural-resource assets, the Latin American economy is diversifying at warp speed, evolving into a contemporary economic model with new and developing stakes in value-added finished goods; knowledge-based industries; and intellectual property products destined for international markets.

MANY COUNTRIES, ONE REGION

While legacy differences of opinion and interest exist from country to country in Latin America, a nascent collective regional identity, propelled by common economic interests pervades. Understanding the nature of the diversity and the common threads that bind the region together is crucial in contemplating a successful mid-to long-term Latin America strategy. In these markets, long-standing relationships and an in-depth knowledge of local practices often determine the outcome of business discussions.

EXTENSIVE REGIONAL REACH

At Duane Morris & Selvam LLP and our joint venture parent Duane Morris LLP, our history of involvement and support for business interests in Latin America transcends a broad range of industries in every Latin American country. With our long-standing relationships with a vast network of law firms and practitioners in every capital in Latin America forged over 30 years of practice in the region, we are uniquely placed to service your Latin American legal needs. Our clients include Latin American companies doing business around the world as well as global corporations exploring their expansion within this fast-evolving region.
